There was a chorus of "noes" against the suggestion of closing. The great majority of the 1,100 members of the exchange are exuberant over the flood of speculation and are urging it to even greater height. The lid is off and nobody wants to check the rising tide for a minute. The brokers are making money out of commissions faster than it has rolled into Wall Street for many years. Every day brings a new army of recruits from Poughkeepsie Man Who Abandoned the country.

Millions of dollars are deposited in commissions. There is no way to count the total. Sales of 2,000,000 would bring $300,000 a day for the brokers and they are hungry to get it. One of the exchange governors. acting as spokesman for his associates, was asked whether any measures were being taken by the exchange to regulate the speculation that is running wild on the floor.

"No," he replied, "the exchange is doing nothing. There is nothing to be done. I believe that some brokers are requiring higher margins from their customers and limiting certain accounts.
